Description

Peter B. Jones pottery is reminiscent of early Haudenosaunee (Iroquois) pottery, derived from traditional Haudenosaunee (Iroquois) pit firing and built of coiling and slab construction. His art often directly reflects the issues that have impacted the Haudenosaunee. On this pot Jones created a map outlining New York State commemorating The Clinton Sullivan campaign, a military campaign in retaliation for the loyalty of many Iroquois to the British during the Revolutionary War. The campaign took the form of "MISSION: TOTAL DESTRUCTION AND DEVASTATION" as Native villages were burnt and crops destroyed.
