Sash

Date
c. 1830

Primary Maker
Choctaw

Medium
Wool cloth, glass beads, silk binding, cotton backing, thread

Description
Typical 19th-century Choctow sashes bore this popular double scroll design similar to those found on ancient Southeastern pottery. Sashes such as these were worn around the waist or in pairs crossed over the chest. The sash is probably the earliest component of traditional dress still in use today.
