Description

Scene of men and children making cider in a large building

/barn. On the left side, an older boy pulls at a crank on an apple press while one little girl peers into the vat catching the juice, and another little girl looks up at the press. On the right side, a man holding a jug sits on a barrel and gestures at a baby being held by a young girl. There is a contraption in the center presumably for mashing apples, where an older boy is holding a basket; a smaller boy crouches at the other end. There is a bay horse with a star on its forehead in the background. Other barrels and jugs sit on the ground.
