Description

paper are two additional sketches. The first shows a man wearing a colonial-like outfit holding the hand of a young girl. This image has been cut as only half of the man is showing. The second image shows two men in a canoe with paddles. This image is also boxed out and shows a rock in the background along with some foliage. Men wear leather-like outfits and caps. To the bottom left of this image within the box is "Darley" and below the box to the right, barely legible reads "Appleton's Edition 1872."
