Description

Bowl made of shell tempered ceramic, found in three pieces and restored. The front of the bowl has a bird-like yet human face. The eyes and mouth are small slits, the nose is angular, and the ears are formed by swirls in the shell. The hair is represented by texture and is pulled into a bun at the back of the head. A short neck leads into the bowl. Across from the face are maces carried by members of society. The bowl is black, grey, off white, with some areas of green-grey in color.
