Description

Painted enlarged photograph of a young boy sitting in a wicker chair. His left arm rests on the back of the chair. His left hand is resting in his lap. He sits in the chair at a slight angle. His left leg is folded under his right with his left foot pointed toward the background and his right foot hanging over the front. He is wearing a blue jacket, vest and knickers with white and blue striped lapels. He wears dark stockings and boots. He looks toward the camera. His hair is combed off his forehead, with a possible braid down the back, and the sides are tucked behind his ears, with the longer hair going down his back. He does not smile. The chair is painted a whitish color and the background a light blue. The image is framed in an ornate wooden frame with carved log and leaf design around the outer edge and a scalloped design on the inside edge. The outer carving has been gilded. (donor states it is the original frame)
