Description

A group of twenty-two men, women and children gather on the Farrell Farm in Ripley, New York ca. 1905 or 1906.

Two of the men sit on a wagon drawn by a horse team that can be seen behind the group on the left. A barn is beyond the horses in partial view on the left and other farm buildings beyond that. A large barn with an open door, and of possibly newer construction is behind the group. The woman on the right holds a couple bunches of what appear to be grapes, as do some of the other people posing for the photograph.
