Harvesting Flax

Date

c. 1890-1910

Medium

Photographic paper

Description

A large group of men work in a field harvesting flax. Less than half of them stand in the center of the photograph among piles of flax on the ground that have been cut down and are likely ready to be bundled. Another group of the farm workers gather on the right side of the photograph in an area of unharvested flax. In front of them are bundles of flax along the harvested and unharvested line. More bundled flax is on the left side of the photograph.
